

Chemical Emergency Response
Jon Gibbard, Practice Director
National Chemical Emergency Centre

Presenter biography

Jon is the Practice Director for the National Chemical Emergency Centre, one of Ricardo-Energy & Environment's 7 divisions. Jon has 12 years' experience in the business.

Jon has led significant change in NCEC growing the team and customer base over the last 5 years and securing much internal investment (in people, technology and training) to ensure NCEC stays at the cutting edge of the provision of chemical telephone emergency response and compliance globally. Jon leads the practice as well as managing many of the client relationships related to NCEC's chemical emergency response service. Jon is a strong advocate of chemical safety and response in industry and champions best practice and compliance globally.

Jon has a degree in Marine Geography and an Executive MBA from Henley Business School.

Presentation abstract

- Jon Gibbard, The National Chemical Emergency Centres Director will present on chemical telephone emergency response. This is a must see presentation for all those manufacturing, shipping or distributing chemicals, both nationally and internationally. Jon will cover;
 - The importance of emergency response and the requirements for an emergency response service (in house or outsourced)
 - The global transport and supply regulations and the requirements this places on telephone emergency response provision
 - The specifics around compliance in China and with European Poison Centre harmonisation
 - Best practice in emergency response and in responsible care from industry peers, and
 - A case study on a medical incident that NCEC responded too
- Jon will finish with some key takeaway to-dos for compliance managers responsible for providing emergency response for their companies.