Course Description and Objectives

This online course covers some of the practical elements of UK REACH aimed at exporters to the UK and will be part of a joint registration, working with UK importers (customers and distributors) or UK based Only Representatives.

The objective is to ensure that the non-UK exporter realises that there is a lot of the technical work that can be done by themselves and that the importer or Only Representative who is managing the registration does not have to do all the work. Even if relying on third-parties as legal registrants, it is important to appreciate what is and what is not needed in order to manage work-load and costs.

Although the UK and EU will maintain virtually parallel systems in terms of terminology and technical standards, there are issues with regard to responsibility in the supply chain, especially if supplying the UK and EU through hubs in the UK or EU.

Determining responsibility is important for issues such as registration of substances, provision of SDS and labelling of chemicals. Exploring options of supply line responsibility can improve efficiency and help decide if using customers or distributors is preferable over paying for professional third party service providers or vice-versa.

Intended Audience

This course is a “high level” overview. More in-depth distance learning on individual topics covered are being developed by CHCS for future dates.

Course Fee: $450 / members      $540 / non-members

Course Director / Instructor

Mark Selby

Director, Denehurst Chemical Safety Ltd

Mark Selby has worked in the area of regulatory science for over 30 years, starting with a UK-based speciality chemical manufacturer before working for 10 years at a major international contract research organisation.

Working for the last 20 years as an independent consultant with Denehurst Chemical Safety Ltd, Mark provides training and advice on the use of data for classification and labelling and for environmental and workplace risk assessments in support of a range of EU chemical supply legislation including SDS. Mark is also working with REACHReady as part of their industry help desk and is a regular author of technical guidance, aiming to take away the mystery of the Regulations.

Mark is a regular CHCS trainer and also works with various industry groups and government agencies covering REACH, CLP, SDS writing and Risk Assessment.
